LIFE SCIENCE CARES

Why join Life Science Cares?

It's good business. Research shows a well-designed corporate social responsibility program increases employee engagement and productivity, while reducing employee turnover and the costs associated with turnover. And employees these days expect a diverse array of volunteer opportunities year-round.

It's good citizenship. Poverty, wealth inequality and the opportunity gap are the societal challenges of our time in Greater Boston. With more than 20% of Boston families living in poverty, not working to address the issue means we are turning our backs on our neighbors.

How does it work?

1. Life Science Cares finds and evaluates nonprofit organizations doing the most effective and impactful work fighting poverty in Greater Boston. Through an application and grant review process, we find programs and organizations where we can have clear, measurable and unique impact as an industry.
2. LSC provides financial grants to these partners and builds deep relationships to understand how the industry's other resources (time & talent) can be put to use.
3. We work across our member organizations to recruit volunteers to meet our partners' needs. These can be individuals, informal company teams or all-company efforts, and programs can be structured for one-time or ongoing participation. You receive seasonal volunteer calendars, monthly newsletters and invitation to upcoming events and share with your entire team.
4. LSC tracks and publicizes the results of our collective efforts—via regular member communications, company-specific impact reports, materials you can share via your Intranet or employee communications vehicles, social media and traditional media channels.
